Anglo Indian Menu

Anglo Indian cuisine can be traced back to the arrival of the Portuguese traders in India who brought with themselves 'never before seen objects', objects of religious nature, food, wine, vinegar and above all the strange language they spoke. The society, the religion, the culture and above all the food could be said to be influenced by the various European invasions in India which has evolved over centuries to what it is today.

Throughout the colonial period, many new hybrid cuisines came into existence. The Indian khansamas and the Chittagong Moghs (Maghs) of those times innovated new dishes, which combined some of the flavors of India with those of Britain and Europe and vice versa. Anglo Indian families who were influenced by the Portuguese, British, Dutch and French, incorporated the many herbs and spices that grew around them and developed their own unique cuisine.

Travel back to the bygone Raj with the revival of our very own Anglo Indian Menu. Savour traditional fare of the time like Railway Lamb Curry, Chicken Dak Bungalow, Cutlets and more as we bring the best of Anglo Indian food home to your dining table.

Elements of The Grand

“The Grand staircase depicts Armenian wood work, gunmetal on banister of highly polished Burma teak, encompassing the marble lotus fountain and the regal Belgian chandelier, leading up to the Tea Lounge and The Grand Ballroom.”

Lesser Known Facts

The use of ice at The Grand Hotel began in the early 1920's when ice first came to Calcutta in well packaged containers on ships sailing all the way from The United States of America. While it was used in hospitals and was purchased by affluent people around the city, at The Grand Hotel, Mr. Stephen, its proprietor, sold ice water at the price of 1 anna a glass.
